Do you want to create a better, more respectful digital world for children and young people?

Are you perhaps -

- Excited about supporting others, especially within learning?
- Interested in engaging with businesses and supporting them to be more ethical around their activities in the digital world?
- Passionate about young people's rights, and creative in raising awareness?
- Buzzing with ideas about how new tech can be developed with young people's rights at their centre?
- A budding event designer, and love gathering people together to celebrate?

If it's a yes from you to any of the above - and you are between 11 and 15 – join the 5Rights Youth Leadership Group!

What is the project about?

After a 15-month investigation, the Young Scot 5Rights Youth Commission published their recommendations to the Scottish Government on how Scotland can realise children and young people's rights in the digital world. We are now looking for 15 young people from all across Scotland to develop and implement some of these recommendations.

What will you do?

You will spend 12 months investigating how we can implement some of the 5Rights Youth Commission's recommendations. This will involve speaking to key organisations, leaders and decision-makers. It will also involve some investigation work in your own time. As a Youth Leader you will take part in 6-8 core meetings throughout the year, plus various other events.
